

Success, Filters, and Hard Questions

What has success looked like to you? Describe a time when you felt successful, influential, and fulfilled.

What do you wear to feel successful? What does your environment look like? What sounds do you hear? Who do you talk with?

“Stuck” is a feeling that we all cycle through more often than we’d like. Consider what feels stuck right now for you.

Using the success imagery we just created, imagine your “life after stuck.” It could be a big change or just a more free flowing version of NOW.

What does life after stuck feel like to you?

What activities do you regular enjoy in “life after stuck?”

What skills are you using regularly in “life after stuck?”

Your success may not be linear.

What squiggly, circular, zig-zaggy lines can you draw between your feeling of success and your vision of “life after stuck?”

What information, conversation, or distraction sources have you become dependent on?

Create a filter that keeps you moving forward. This is an intention that creates barrier between the information you need and the information that keeps you dependent on more.

Check in with your goal. What information do you really need RIGHT NOW? What information can you do without?

Name 3 people who embody the success you're trying to achieve.

If you could ask them each 2 hard questions about how they got to where they are now, what would you ask them?

Posing the questions to “someone else” allows us to step out of our own limitations, lack of confidence, and inexperience.

Asking someone else helps us see the true wealth of resources at our disposal.

Now... how would they answer?

ABOUT TARA GENTILE

I push passion-driven entrepreneurs to actualize their ideas, visions, and dreams – turning them into dollars and cents. I ask the questions you were hoping I wouldn't. I pose the challenges you weren't expecting. I suggest the impossible and show you how it's done.

I rediscovered my own dream after I became a stay at home mom. It took time, experimentation, practice, and a heap of ambition but I grew a few bucks a month into a few thousand and a few thousand a month into a 6-figure business.

It's not enough to simply create a product, dream up a service, or make an offer. Your work must be aligned with your very core to realize its financial potential. As I continue to align my work with my core spirit, I continue to grow my business, becoming free & financially independent.
